

Sparkling Wine/Champagne

Champagne and most other sparkling wine is usually made from three grapes. Chardonnay also responsible for many of the world's best white wines, Pinot Noir the great red grape of Burgundy and Pinot Meunier another red grape. The fact that the winemaking process then magically produces a white sparkling wine when two of the grapes are red adds wonderfully to the mystic of the world's favourite celebration wine! Vintage Champagne is only produced in a few select years when the grapes are of good enough quality to produce arguably the best sparkling wine on the planet.

Chardonnay

Responsible for some of the worlds very best white wines such as Chablis, and White Burgundy. Matthew Jukes author of the UK's biggest selling wine publication The Wine List 2005, describes it thus, "Ranging in style from fairly colourless, neutral and characterless to wildly exotic, rich and golden – you can detect honey, butter, freshly baked patisserie, hazelnuts, butterscotch, orange blossom and fresh meadow flowers in full-on Chardonnays."

RED WINES

Merlot

“Merlot is a juicy grape, with supple smooth, silky, blackberry, plum, red wine gum and fruitcake flavours. As Merlot is usually oak aged, the fruit flavours are often accompanied by a touch of sweet wood-smoke barrel nuances.”

Matthew Jukes

Chile is making Carmènere it's own. "An old Bordeaux variety now virtually extinct in France. Widely used in Chile where until recently it was mistaken for Merlot." Not surprisingly it tastes similar to Merlot with an intriguing twist.

Claret/Claret Style Blends

The auld alliance between Scotland and France was based on this world- renowned wine. It's a blend that incorporates principally Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot' but other grapes such as Cabernet Franc and Petit Verdot are also used.

'A great Claret is the Queen of all natural wines and...the highest perfection of all wines that have ever been made. It is delicate and harmonious beyond all others.'

Gamay

One of the distinct features of wines made from Gamay grapes is its fruity flavour, scent, and strong likeness to Pinot Noir. When you smell this wine, you will get the scent of cherries, pears, bananas and oddly enough bubblegum. It also has a hint of wood in the scent because it is aged in oak casks.

Pinotage

This grape is a cross of Cinsault, a grape used mostly for blending in the Rhone, and Pinot Noir, the great red grape of Burgundy. It is grown almost exclusively in South Africa. Abraham Izak Perold a Professor at Stellenbosch University successfully crossed the varieties in 1925.

"Pinotage is an earthy, spicy, deeply coloured grape with tobacco and plums on the nose, crushed blackberry fruit on the palate and a hearty, full, savoury finish."

BIO DYNAMIC WINES

Biodynamics is an agricultural system first developed by Austrian philosopher Rudolf Steiner at the start of the 20th century. It is based on organic farming, but goes beyond the obvious avoidance of chemicals and synthetic treatments, to a much more holistic and philosophical regard for the land. Some of its tenets cannot easily be explained, including farming by a calendar that respects the earth's magnetic fields and the rhythms of the sun, moon, planets and stars, and working with preparations that seem almost mediaeval: infusions of herbs and minerals, some, indeed, packed inside cow horns and buried underground.
